

Tribhuvan University is the oldest and largest university in Nepal. It was established in 1959 and named after King Tribhuvan. The university was founded to provide higher education opportunities within Nepal, as many students previously had to travel abroad for advanced studies. Today, it plays a major role in shaping the country's educational system and producing skilled professionals in various fields.

The main campus of Tribhuvan University is located in Kirtipur, near Kathmandu. The university has a vast academic network that includes constituent campuses, affiliated colleges, research centers, and central departments spread across Nepal. It offers programs in science, management, engineering, medicine, humanities, education, and many other disciplines.

Tribhuvan University is known for serving a very large number of students every year. Thousands of students from different parts of Nepal study under its affiliated colleges and campuses. Because of its wide reach and affordable education system, the university has become an important institution for higher education in the country.

The university has contributed greatly to Nepal's social, political, and economic development. Many famous politicians, scholars, teachers, engineers, doctors, and administrators of Nepal are graduates of Tribhuvan University. It has also helped in promoting research, cultural preservation, and academic development throughout the nation.

Despite its achievements, Tribhuvan University also faces challenges such as delayed examination results, administrative issues, and the need for modernization. However, it still remains one of the most respected educational institutions in Nepal and continues to influence the future of Nepali higher education.